LANSING, Mich. (NEWSCHANNEL 3) - A group from Western Michigan University is heading to Lansing Wednesday to talk about jobs created by research grants.

The Western group helped develop printing presses for electronic circuitry. A grant from the Michigan Initiative for Innovation and Entrepreneurship made it possible.

Wednesday the state plans to announce a new round of funding.

Projects include a partnership between GM and a state school, helping develop new car technology.

The grant program aims to use university research to train future workers.
